

What is a dog park

A dog park is a clearly defined location where dog owners can safely and legally exercise and socialize their dog's off-leash in a controlled environment. Generally, they are enclosed with some type of fencing to prevent or restrict the dog from leaving the designated area. Most have double gates at the entrances to allow entering and exiting the park to either unleash or leash your pet, but is restrained by the double gate system. Many dog parks have separate areas for large dogs over 25 pounds and dogs less than 25 pounds. Some dog parks have separate areas for when dog fights break out or a dog exhibits unusual behavior, that a dog can be placed in these segregated areas to act as a cooling off period, rather than leaving the park altogether.

Off-leash dog parks provide a social setting in which people can gather and interact in friendship. Dog parks are places where dog owners and non dog owners can delight in the entertaining and interesting interaction of dogs at play. People somehow find it easier to converse with others with dogs as the initial focus, breaking down the usual social barriers that make people in our society perceive others as "strangers."

Dogs improve people's health and increase resistance to disease by providing companionship and unconditional love. Dogs give people something to care for, providing pleasurable activity, such as exercise and providing a source of constancy in our changing lives, stimulate by providing comfort with touch, and being a pleasure to watch.

Dog parks reduce the likelihood that dogs will be let loose in park areas where they could interfere with other park users such as bicyclists, skate-boarders, rollerblading, hikers, and children at play. Providing separate areas for dogs to exercise, segregates dog owners from other users and reduce the risk of collisions, etc. Years of experience at dog parks across the country indicate that dogs are less aggressive in open areas because they are on neutral territory and not constrained by their leashes. Dog Parks allow dogs to learn socialization skills, provides exercise opportunities, tend to bark less in public, and tend to be less destructive at home.

Dedicated dog parks improve public health by keeping dog waste confined to one area. Peer pressure encourages dog owners to pick up after their dogs and keep the park clean. Dog parks provide a centralized area to provide information on dog health, veterinary services, boarding, training, etc.

Amenities could include some or all of the following, but are not limited to these. Items such as water fountains for dogs & humans alike, cooling stations, agility equipment, fire hydrants, outdoor lighting, lakes, ponds, or flowing water, additional shade for all, waste bags and containers for pet waste, tools for picking up pet waste, and benches.

Clear rules and guidelines are generally posted at all entrances to the Dog Park and a composite of the rules are listed below.
